SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains approximately 505 letters and related materials detailing Leesburg and Loudoun County Virginia life, customs, education, families, and experiences primarily before and during the American Civil War. The collection demonstrates the fluidity of society during formative years of the United States with correspondence ranging from South Carolina. Pennsylvania, New York and westward to Kentucky and documenting duels, education, and the home front during war time. The collection provides greater insight into the lives of women in the nineteenth century than of Mott's medical practice.

The letters are divided into two primary groups those written to Armistead Randolph Mott and those written to Virginia L. Bentley (Mrs. Armistead R. Mott). Letters to and from other correspondents are filed chronologically by author or recipient at the end of the collection. Many of the letters include envelopes, though through the years these envelopes have in some instances been separated from their original letters. As near as possible, and based on the organization of materials as received from the donor, envelopes have been filed with their corresponding letters. Envelope without identifiable letters have been filed separately. Prior to processing this collection, the materials had been used heavily by family and other researchers with a variety of notations made, primarily on envelopes. These annotations, largely, dates, have been left though may not necessarily be accurate. During processing letters without dates were researched and dates appended in brackets based on contents of letters; efforts were made to identify all correspondents.

Many of the letters and envelopes are in fragile condition having survived a fire in December 1908 at the Mott house in Leesburg, VA (Washington Post 12 December 1908). The letters have been cleaned, flattened, interleaved with archival papers and encased in mylar. Because numerous letters are written on very thin paper, cross written, and the ink is faint or has bled a researcher may find using the digital images more convenient. Additionally there are transcriptions of select letters in Shannon-Combs thesis.
